Omaha, Neb., Oct. 5.—Nebraska's commemoration of her fifty years of statehood was brought to a climax today with a visit of President Wilson to take part in the celebration of the semi-centennial.

Arriving at 11:40 his program included a short address at the luncheon of the Omaha Commercial club, riding with Mrs. Wilson at the head of the historical pageant, and afterward reviewing the parade, and with an address tonight at the municipal auditorium. Before the address President and Mrs. Wilson will be guests of honor at a dinner given by the State Historical society.

Cheered by Thousands.

A cheering crowd of thousands of people gathered from all parts of Nebraska and neighboring states, greeted the president on his arrival, and continued the applause as he proceeded through the streets in an automobile. A non-partisan committee officially welcomed the president and Mrs. Wilson to Omaha.

Because of the Ak-Sar-Bien celebration of Nebraska's admission to statehood, Omaha was decked with flags, decorated buildings and banded flags almost constantly. The president immediately entered into the spirit of the occasion. Bands of Indians and cowboys were herded to participate in the parade. An estimated fully 100,000 persons lined the Placed at Reception.—Missouri Valley, Ia., Oct. 5.—President Wilson crossing Iowa on his way to Omaha today, was warmly greeted by the receptions given him in the middle west. The president was up early this morning, and with Mrs. Wilson appeared on the platform at Carroll, Ia., and at Des Moines. At each place he met the crowds for congratulating him and the crowds for congratulating Mrs. Wilson, the president said: "I think she could be elected."

"I am going to appoint it before I'm re-elected," Mr. Wilson replied.

"I am pretty far from any tether," the president remarked, "but I like to get out among you folks. Thank you for coming to the station."

"Thank you," responded the crowd.

At Denison a crowd of school children welcomed Mr. and Mrs. Wilson.

Wishes Women Could Vote.

QUESTIONS ABOUT FOOD

Answered by ALFRED W. McCANN.

Q.—What is the difference between Grades A and B milk, and how do both of these differ from Grade C?

A.—Milk in order to be Grade A should come from cows from disease as determined by tuberculin tests and physical examinations by a qualified veterinarian. It should be produced and handled by employees free from disease as determined by physical inspection of a qualified physician. It should also, if not pasteurized, be produced under such conditions of sanitation that the bacteria count does not at the time of delivery to the consumer exceed 10,000 per cubic centimetre. Milk of this kind should score at least 80 on the United States Bureau of Animal Industry card.

Q.—Pasteurized, Grade A milk should contain no more than 200,000 bacteria per cubic centimetre. Pasteurization must be carried out under official supervision, and the bacteria count must be so reduced that by the time the milk is delivered to the consumer the bacteria count does not exceed 10,000 per cubic centimetre.

Q.—Does the addition of salt to buttermilk destroy the beneficial germs contained in the beverage? T. I. A.—The amount of salt that would ordinarily be added to buttermilk to improve its taste is not sufficient to destroy the friendly buttermilk germs.

WHAT IT COSTS.

Many newspapers have already advanced their subscription price and advertising rates, and many more will be compelled to do so. The result has been a shortage and an advance in price of anywhere from fifty per cent up. Publishers who are compelled to go on the open market and pay five and six cents per pound for their paper are in a bad way.

The metropolitan papers as a rule are protected to some extent by contracts with large mills that are able to take care of them. A few of them own their own mills. The Chicago Tribune and Kansas City Star belong to this class. The Indianapolis News publishes a letter recently received from a rural subscriber, who objected to paying an advanced price, and then comments as follows:

"Our friends' letter suggests the idea to us that a little information pertaining to the cost of producing a newspaper would not be amiss at the present time. The average of the Indianapolis News varies in size from sixteen to thirty-six pages per day. The average for all issues throughout the year is twenty-two pages. As there are 312 publishing days in the year, exclusive of Sundays, every yearly subscriber receives about 6,864 pages of the News in twelve months, or about 115 pounds in weight. The second-class postal rate under which newspapers are mailed is one cent per pound, consequently the postage alone on every yearly subscription of the Indianapolis News is approximately $1.15.

"The cost of white paper used in every yearly subscription is more than double the above amount. These two items alone exceed the subscription price of $3.00 per year. There is also to be taken into account the cost of ink, telegraph and telephone bills, circulation expense, cost of gathering news, illustrations, cartoons, composition, stereotyping, press work, mailing room expense, and expense of delivery to postoffice, trains and cars."

The inland daily press is confronted with the same problems and the same relative expense. The cost of white paper and the expense of converting into a newspaper, absorbs more than the subscription price. Publishers all over the country are facing a new problem, and advances all along the line are likely to occur.

THE SHORTAGE OF CATTLE. The American Bankers' association, at its Kansas City convention, has been considering the alarming decrease in cattle production. Much sentiment was developed in favor of an investigation of the subject by congress.

Congressional investigations commonly provide simply a lot of black and white government reports which few people read. However this is an urgent subject that some responsible authority should take up. Meat prices will keep climbing until more cattle are raised.

There is only one remedy for the shortage of cattle and that is a law prohibiting the slaughter of veal. It is estimated that 13,000,000 veal calves are slaughtered every year. This is a waste that could be stopped, and when it is the supply of cattle will show a marked increase.

The most indigestible meat in the market is veal. Much of it is so young that it is unfit to eat, and should never be offered for sale. We have all kinds of laws and all sorts of inspection for meat, but the law most needed is a statute prohibiting the slaughter of veal entirely.

The meat laws and the game laws are very much alike in some respects. We have the closed season on game and the size of the bag is restricted, yet we pay no attention to the breeding ground where eggs are gathered by the million. We have yet to discover that you can't raise a duck without an egg any more than you can raise a steer without a calf.

WAR AN EDUCATION.

There is nothing like war as an educator. Fine theories are blasted to pieces by grim facts. A nation learns that it must depend upon itself. The movement for protection in England is not sentimental or theoretical, but is the exercise of the instinct of self-preservation.

"We are melting down millions of English sovereigns and coining them into American money," said the director of the mint on Sept. 29, speaking at the American Bankers' association convention at Kansas City. "I estimate that the amount of gold still to be received by the United States from the allied nations will be $400,000,000. The amount of gold received up to date is over $750,000,000."

Naturally, England is trying to stop this drain of gold. It will diminish the purchase of American goods as fast as possible, and establish a protective tariff system as soon as the public can be made to see the fallacy and danger of the free trade system. "Free trade England" will cease to be a menace after the war. The country will need protection, as never before, and when established we will hear less about the pauper labor of Europe.

"THOROUGHNESS." One of the favorite words of the older generation used to be "thorough." When the boys failed to tread down the hay properly in the barn loft or left the vegetable garden half weeded, they were told to go back and do it "thoroughly." It was the spirit of the age.

This is the spirit today in the Old World. German manufacturers have won trade by a disposition to perfect every last detail. They gained a strange hold on Europe early in the war by having everything ready to the last button. The allies are finally pushing the Germans back, because they, too, are showing a mastery of perfection of detail.

Are we "thorough" enough here in America to meet European competition after the war is over? A manufacturer was talking about this a few days ago. He told this incident. There was one girl in his shop whose work it is to give a careful inspection to every finished article. She had got in the habit of passing the product along with but the most rapid glance. The foreman remonstrated. The girl knowing that help is very scarce, told him pertly that if he did not like her work he could get some one else. There is no future success in store for anyone who takes that point of view.

The workpeople are not the only ones who lack the spirit of thoroughness. The complaint of failure of American shells to explode, of American shoes made with paper soles, looks in the same direction. It is a constant experience in buying goods, particularly when you buy them of some distant mail order house, to find serious defects.

There is needed in our country a revival of the old thorough spirit. The mechanic should be ashamed to pass on his work until every detail is perfected. The manufacturer should be unwilling to distribute anything less than the best. Better turn out a smaller product if it is faithfully made in every respect.

The women of the country are organized for Hughes. They publish a bulletin which is crowded with good, strong arguments for the republican candidate, and a special woman's train left New York yesterday for a tour of twenty-eight states. Milwaukee and Madison are the Wisconsin cities on the route. Mr. Hughes' attitude on suffrage is popular with the women who want the ballot.

It is estimated that one million six hundred thousand automobiles will represent the output of American manufacturers in 1917. The supply for 1916 was not equal to the demand, and many factories are booked with orders for months ahead. The industry employs an army of workmen and opens up a new field for young men as every town and hamlet demands a garage and expert service.

American capital to the extent of $60,000,000 has been secured to build a railroad 1,500 miles long in the heart of China. This means a long stride for civilization. When the war is over Japan may be called to account for Chinese interference. The open door of the empire is of vital importance.

The New York city strike failed to materialize, thanks to the good sense of contented workmen, and for the fact that congress was not in session to aid in the disturbance.

"They told me you are the greatest weak-minded expert—I mean, expert on weak-mindedness, in the country," said Mrs. Loopyop. "So I've brought little Hampton in to see you. He doesn't get along at all well in school, and if there's anything wrong with his brain, of course, I'd be pleased to know it."

"I shall be able to tell you in a very few moments, madam," replied Professor Dingwatts. "Hampton, try to repeat this sentence after me: A pack of pickled peanuts prove poor Paul poisoned pups."

"Yes sir, will you say it again, first," said Hampton.

"Certainly, my lad—don't get excited, now. A pack of pickled pups prove—I mean, a pack of poor Pauls—that is to say, a pickled pack—wait a moment, now. You're sure you're not at all excited or hurried, my boy?"

"Yes sir," answered Hampton.

"Then I'll repeat it for you. A pack of pickled—madam, there's no question of it. Any boy that has to be a simple sentence repeated before he can attempt to say it for himself is undoubtedly non compos firma."

And the great man puffed out his cheeks and returned to his books, and Mrs. Loopyop took Hampton sadly by the hand and led him away to an institution.

On the Spur of the Moment ROY K. MOULTON

But if it's Not Your Own. The nearest little squaller that you folks have ever heard, its disposition's awful and its temper is absurd. Its face would stop an eight-day clock, its howling a fright. Its rasping voice jars on your nervous system day and night. There's not the slightest doubt at all that it will turn out bad. For it has got the toughest face a youngster ever had. It will some day be a burglar, you can safely bet on that. You have never seen an equal to the if it is your neighbor's.

Merely a Rumor. (From the Torch, Central Lake, Mich.)

There was a rumor floating around in Peaceful Valley that Laura (Little) Witte had been murdered by her husband. A letter from Capt. Allan F. Little, now in Ann Arbor, says the rumor is entirely unfounded; that the Wittes are living together in their home, happy and contented as a pair of turtle doves, or words to that effect. It's simply another case of some people spending 28 hours a day minding other people's business, and the rest of the day attending to their own.

Told by Our Minister. I was traveling in the east recently in a sleeper and when I put on my shoes in the morning I found a black one and a tan one underneath my berth.

I summoned the porter and said: "How does it come that I have got one black shoe and one tan shoe?" "Well, boss," said he, "that's sholy something strange goin' on in this cab. This is the second time this has happened this mornin'."

During a recent suffrage parade a man carried one of the banners for his wife who was not able to march. She sat in the grandstand and watched the parade go by.

When they reached home the husband said: "Well, Mary, how did I march? Did I do the job right?"

"You carried that banner in the most disgraceful manner I ever saw," replied the angry spouse. "You dragged it in the dust all the way. What did you mean by doing that?"

"Didn't you see what was printed on that banner?" he asked.

"No, what was it?"

to offer any burglars who visit our domicile the following hints: Our genuine imitation pearl shirt studs, which cost 39 cents when we were married five years ago, are still in the dress shirt, hanging behind the clothes press door. If the burglar can get them out of the shirt he can do better than we can, and is certainly some burglar. Our house money is kept in a cracked teapot on the plate rail in the dining room, just northeast of the clock. The solid silver knives and forks are in plain sight on the third pantry shelf from the bottom and the cut-glass pickle boat is in the bottom of the dining room buffet. It is the only thing there and could hardly be missed. The hard coal is in the basement. The only other thing of value that we have is one everyday shirt. We hide that where nobody on earth could find it. don't muss things all up, that's all.

Grave Defect in Military System.

During our Mexican war under Gen.
Winfield Scott 104,000 troops were employed, and only 12,000 of this number were of the militia. Scott was much handicapped, however, by the custom of short enlistments, and the total absence of system pertaining thereto.
The commander learned on reaching Mexico that seven of his eleven regiments had decided to terminate their services at the end of the year, a problem that was only solved by the luck of vitality of the Mexican forces.

LEAVE JANESVILLE COMMERCIAL CLUB AT EIGHT-THIRTY PROMPTLY—EVENTS
PLANNED.

AUTOMOBILE PARADE

Officials Request All to Keep Place in Line of Parade and to Travel According to Schedule to Avoid Confusion.

Final arrangements have been completed for the picnic to be given on Saturday by the Janesville Commercial club in honor of the boys who have participated in the various contests conducted throughout the summer by that organization. The program for the day is as follows:
Leave Janesville 8:30 a. m.
Leave Beloit 9:30 a. m.
Arrive Harlem Consolidated School
10:30 a. m.
Inspection of School, 10:30-10:50
a. m.

A Series of Talks on Consolidated Schools, 10:50-11:30 a. m. Supt. Palet of the school, Mr. Abbie Craig, assistant superintendent of the Winnebago county schools, members of the Harlem school board.
Short period devoted to questions.
Announcement of plan is perfectly free to ask questions. The object of the inspection is to acquaint everyone with all details of school consolidation.
Inspection of Concrete Road and talks by authorities, 11:30-12:30.
George S. Parker, Chairman Good Roads Committee, C. E. Moore, J. A.
Mannon, Executive Secretary of the Good Roads Association of Wisconsin.

Picnic dinner, 1:00 p. m.—Everyone is requested to bring their own lunch.
Games, etc., 2:15-3:30 p. m. Under direction of Stowell Lovejoy, chairman of Recreation Committee.

Return trip.
The officials in charge of the transportation are arranging to take every possible day by automobile. The Beloit Business Men's association has co-operated most generously in furnishing a large number of machines to handle the people from the southern part of the county. Everyone is requested to be at the office of the Commercial club, on the corner of East Main street, and North Bluff streets, at eight-thirty promptly.
Over one hundred machines will take part in the parade down to Harlem Park. Because of the large number of machines requested that all stay in the line and keep their position all the way down. There will be marshals who can give all necessary information along the way. Great confusion would result if everyone did not park his car and make the starts according to schedule.

A large number of acceptances have come in during the last two days, but the various committees are most cordial in their invitations to all residents of this county to attend the picnic especially if they can furnish their own machines.

The automobiles furnished by the Commercial club are primarily for the use of those boys who have been engaged in the contests, and who are not able to provide their own conveyances. Should there be more people than there are accommodations for, the interurban cars will be used.
It is planned for the benefit of everyone, and will afford a most excellent opportunity to gain progressive ideas that may be applied to the community of Rock County.
Everyone is looking forward to a most enjoyable day.

Remember to be on hand at the Commercial club promptly at half past eight.

JANESVILLE PLANT HAS RAPID GROWTH

James Dyeing and Bleach Company a Thriving Infant Industry.—Commercial Club a Great Aid.

There are probably few people who realize the rapid strides that some of Janesville's young industries have been making under the impetus given by the Janesville Commercial club.
Probably as good an example of this great industrial activity as can be found is that of the James Dyeing and Bleach Works.

Travelers on the Afton road have noticed of late an increasing number of buildings springing up in the neighborhood of the old cotton mill.
They have wondered what they are for. Those who have investigated have found there a new industry, booming in all its branches and employing in the neighborhood of one hundred and fifty men. Mr.
Jones has, by efficient and systematic business planning, built up a business which in a very short time has extended its influence through all parts of the county.

Early in the phenomenal growth of this plant Mr. Jones was strongly tempted to move to another city.
Underscoring to remain in Janesville by the Commercial club, which realized the importance of keeping this industry here. This may be assured, but the people who are prone to doubt the sincerity of the Commercial club and who think that it is not really working for the good of the city.

Mr. Jones says in a letter to the club: "It may be of interest to you to know that I had practically completed plans early in the spring for the removal of my plant to a distant city. Through the efforts of the Commercial club, however, I was induced to change my plans. I have decided to remain in Janesville and to push my business at this point to the utmost."

Plans are at present being made for the further enlargement of the plant and additions to the force employed, which already numbers one hundred and thirty-seven. In a few days one of the highest salaried expert dyers in the United States will join the forces of the Jones plant.
This is but an example of the way business is booming in this city and incidentally of the inestimable benefit of a properly organized and active commercial club. In the past two weeks the Commercial club has been instrumental in securing a road into the Jones plant from the main road.
Heretofore there has been only a dirt road into the factory but with the business this was found to be inadequate to handle the heavy traffic.

The satisfactory arrangements with Mr. Jones were effected through a special committee of the Commercial club, headed by George S. Parker.

Wisconsin D. A. R. May Help Buy Northwest Territory's Capitol Historic Vincennes Landmark

Members of Janesville Chapter Are Interested in Saving General Harrison's "Palace" From Encroaching Factory Zone.

One of the things that the Wisconsin D. A. R. has much pride in is the purchase of old landmarks of historic interest. Places whose associations have given them a touch of romance and a sentimental value that could only be maintained by providing for their perpetuation. In this field the Janesville chapter has endeavored to play its part along with the larger and richer chapters of the greater cities.

There has lately come to the attention of the National D. A. R. the "palace" of the government of the Northwest Territory. This old house is located in Vincennes, Indiana, on the banks of the Wabash. It stands now in the very center of a manufacturing wilderness, yet with its massive structure and quaint old windows it carries even now a dignity and a memory of the days when it was the "first house" of all this vast territory which now comprises the states of Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin, a territory greater than any Napoleon ever ruled.

Built by General Harrison.
The house was built in 1804 by General William Henry Harrison, who was later president of the United States. Here he lived during his infancy as governor of the Northwest territory and for a time even of the era of the Louisiana purchase.
It was the first capital; the first real seat of governmental power in the west. The majesty of a brick house in those days averted the Indians to no small extent in the troublous times of the war of 1812, and even later in various Indian uprisings.

The house was a writer of distinction, who has visited the old palace, says of its present ownership: "How fortunate that in the middle west, with all its careless disregard of historic landmarks, such a unique and splendid memorial should still be standing, almost untouched either by time or by the hands of man."
"How almost sacrilegious that what should be a middle western shrine should still be in the ownership of a private corporation, and—in spite of the efforts of the Vincennes chapter of the D. A. R.—in somewhat imminent danger of being torn down to make room for the erection of a new boiler house or some other incongruous structure."

"Fortunately when General Harrison built his stately mansion in the wilderness, he was a man of vision and of deep and reared a superstructure that is calculated to stand for centuries. The walls of solid brick are more than three feet thick, and the framework is made of solid black walnut timbers, handhewn

JANESVILLE HORSE MAKES GOOD RECORD

A racing horse owned in Janesville than has any other horse in the state.

The horse, named "Maid Riser," is owned jointly by T. F. Siegel and Phil Sheridan. During the season's racing she was entered in seventeen races, and secured six firsts, three second and three third place finishes.

father. Mr. Lehman was born in Poland, Germany, in 1841. In 1865 he moved to Wisconsin and soon afterward married Frieda Behling in Plymouth.
Where he lived for three years. After ter, Mrs. August Behling of Plymouth.

Bush Lives a Man's Lifetime.
Under such favorable conditions as exist in the vine barrens, blueberry culture is to be classed, as to the age of its first bearing, not with the slow-fruiting apple orchard, but with the quick-fruited peach, with this important difference, however, that while the peach tree remains in vigorous fruiting condition for comparatively few years, the blueberry bush, with suitable pruning, bids fair to last a man's lifetime, and even longer.

JUST FOR TONIGHT

By EARL REED SILVERS.

"The strains of 'Just for Tonight' died away. Phil Randall looked into the eyes of Mildred Arnold and smiled. 'Let it go to bed just for tonight with us,' he whispered.

"I guess so, Phil." She spoke kindly, but there was a hint of determination in her voice. "There's Arthur, you know."

Phil frowned darkly. "Are you engaged to him?" "Almost." Mildred's voice quivered slightly. "It isn't announced yet, but two years ago, when he was a sophomore in college, I promised him."

"And now, when you know that he isn't all you thought he was, are you going to keep your promise?"

"Yes." They had walked to the porch of the big gymnasium and were standing in the shadows. "It's the only thing for me to do."

"But your whole future is at stake." "I know, but that doesn't make a promise less binding. Arthur hasn't done anything wrong so far as I know. He's just weak, but lots and lots of men are weak, and girls have married them just the same."

"He's a coward," Phil spoke hotly. "You—you really haven't any right to say that." The girl laid a restraining hand on his arm.

He was silent for a minute or two, but suddenly he turned to her impulsively. "I know I shouldn't say these things," he said, "but it hurts me so to know that you are going to give yourself to someone who isn't worthy of you. Not that I am," he added lustily, "but at least I'm more of a man than Arthur Martin is."

"I know you are," She spoke softly. "The music for the next dance drifted out of the open doorway, and Arthur Martin appeared to claim his partner. Phil watched them until they were lost in the shifting crowd of dancers."

"If only something would happen to show her what a cad he is!" he muttered.

Phil saw them at the baseball game the next afternoon, and in the evening, when he stood on the porch of Ferrell hall, where the final dance of junior week was being held, he watched as they whirled off together to the strains of "Mighty like a Rose," the first waltz of the night.

Phil managed to engage the sixth and seventh dances with Mildred, and instead of staying in the crowded hall they walked over the shadowy paths of the Belmont campus until they came to the steps of the old King's building, where they lingered. They were half hidden in the shadows, and the two persons who stood beneath the arc light, not ten feet away, did not notice them. Phil started as he noted that one of the figures was Arthur Martin and the other Nellie Burr, whom he knew by sight as a factory hand for the Thompson company downtown.

"They could hear Martin speaking angrily."

"I tell you, I'm through," he said. "But you promised to marry me!" There was a hint of tears in the girl's voice.

"I can't marry you; I'm engaged to someone else."

"You must!" She spoke tensely, and seized the arm of his coat. "You can't turn me down like this."

"I'm not turning you down. I didn't promise to marry you—just suggested that we might possibly be married some day."

"You asked me that night on the river."

"I didn't."

"You did—you know you did."

The two in the shadows could not help hearing what was said. Phil recovered from his amazement first, and told Mildred's arm.

"Come on," he suggested. "Let's go back to the hall."

"No," Mildred spoke firmly. "I'm going to find out the truth about this affair."

Before he could stop her she had confronted Martin and the other girl. "Arthur," she asked, "is this girl speaking the truth?"

Martin gazed at her as he saw her. Nellie Burr stepped forward.

"Are you the girl he's engaged to?" she asked.

"Yes."

"Well, he promised to marry me. I gave up all the other boys for him, and now he's going to turn me down."

"Don't believe her," Martin strove desperately to make his voice sound convincing.

"I heard you tell her that you had suggested marriage," Mildred spoke firmly. "I've heard rumors of this kind of things before, Arthur, but I didn't believe them. Now I know that they are so."

"But this girl isn't anything to me." "It doesn't make any difference whether she is or not. You have proved that you can't be trusted."

"Mildred!" There was a world of entreaty in his voice. He took a step toward her.

"No!" She turned away. "You may consider our engagement at an end." Without another word, she took Phil's arm and they walked away.

They were silent until they reached Ferrell hall. As they entered the door the strains of "Just for Tonight" floated across the room.

When the waltz was concluded he looked into her eyes.

"Is it still just for tonight with us?" he questioned.

"No, not for tonight." She smiled up at him. "For always." (Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

OBTAINING SWEET-BIRCH OIL

Industry Has Become Quite a Matter of Importance in Some Sections of the South.

Sweet-birch oil has been made in this country for many years and is obtained from the wood and bark of the black birch. The oil is a product of steam distillation plants, where, in addition to the twigs, bark and young sprouts of the birch, the entire tree is sometimes used. More picturesque are the methods employed by the southern mountaineer. A rough camp and crude distillery are erected near a supply of birch. According to persons who have seen both kinds, the "still" is not unlike the type sometimes employed in the same locality for making "blockade" whisky. The camp is anything which will protect the workmen from the weather. The bark is peeled from the tree and the rough outer portion is scraped off. It is then broken to cook it. A fire is started and the resulting steam is led through a pipe and finally condensed. The heavy oil gathers in a receptacle, while the water runs off. Three or four men compose the usual crew. One of these spends all of his time at the still, while the others gather and prepare the bark. About twenty-two bushels of bark are used for every run and it is said that this amount yields approximately four pounds of oil. Three or four runs a week can be made. The method has been in use for many years, and most of the accessible birch in the valleys has been cut. Each year the oil makers have to go farther back in the mountains. Very often the stills are located in isolated places which can be reached only on foot, and all of the material for the plants and camp are carried in on the backs of the mountaineers.

ACCORDING TO RANCH CODE

Cowboy Did the Only Thing He Felt There Was to Do Under the Circumstances.

A story certainly untrue, but one beautifully plausible, was told by the Abilene (Kan.) Reflector. It concerns a man who—by definition, as the mathematicians say—had spent all his life on a remote cattle ranch and was utterly inexperienced in any tender or tender relations than those which exist between men like himself and between them and their bovine charges. This untutored yet thoroughly well-intentioned person, according to the tale as told, at last went to a border town and there, as might have been expected, he fell promptly and violently in love with the first woman with whom he became acquainted, who happened to be the pretty waitress who served him at the table. His wooing was equally vigorous and successful. In a few days the twain were married and together they started back for the ranch on horseback.

A week later the cowboy returned to the town alone and of deeply sorrowful mien. To the natural and immediate inquiries that were made as to the whereabouts of his bride he replied, with tears starting to his eyes and running down his lean, bronzed cheeks: "She broke her leg two days out and I had to shoot her. And I tell you, boys," he added, "I hated to do it—she was such a good woman!"

Plethora of Family.

In the absence of their mother, little John's two older sisters were finding it rather difficult to manage their mischievous four-year-old brother. One day when he had especially tried their patience they reported the matter to their father just as they were sitting down to dinner. John's father promptly scolded him, and when he had finished, one sister, thinking that the culprit had not been sufficiently impressed, gave her ideas on the subject and when she had concluded the other sister added her opinion. All this time John had made no remarks, but had calmly continued to drink his milk, only gazing attentively across the top of his mug at each speaker in turn. When at last they were silent he set down his mug and leaned back wearily in his chair. "Oh, gee," he observed dejectedly, "I wish I didn't have so much family."

Worth Knowing.

Gumboils are most painful and result generally from a decayed root, which causes the inflammation and abscess that resolves itself into a gumboil. Remove the outside of the face with a hot camomile and poppy head poultice and apply a small white bread-and-milk poultice to the gumboil. Renew frequently. So soon as the pain and swelling have disappeared it is best to have the tooth removed. In cases where decayed and ulcerated roots have been allowed to remain, disease of the jawbone has resulted. Usually when the sufferer takes cold there will be a renewal of the inflammation, pain and annoyance.

Sympathy With Nature.

'Tis an evidence of how directly we are related to Nature, that we more or less sympathize with the weather and take on the color of the day. Goethe said he worked easiest on a high barometer. One is like a chimney that draws well some days and won't draw at all on others, and the secret is mainly in the condition of the atmosphere. Anything positive and decided with the weather is a good omen. A pouring rain may be more auspicious than a sleeping sunshine. When the stove draws well the fogs and fumes will leave your mind.—John Burroughs.

FEW CHANGES IN FOOTBALL RULES THIS SEASON AND THE REFORMERS ARE QUIET

The football game is back again this season with few alterations and with about the same appearance it has shown for the past several seasons. The rules reformers are quiet, have started no agitations and seem to have something else to think about. Perhaps under these circumstances it would not be well to make changes so radical as those the cartoonist has suggested.

Having established a residence in California during the past year, Marie Doro, the charming star, has been urged by her many friends in the motion picture colony to enter politics. WHAT WOULD THE MOVIES BE WITHOUT—Atmosphere. The iron jawed landlady who is always trying to collect room rent from the lovely heroine.

The boob in the seat ahead who tries to be funny during the pathetic scenes.

The piano and the snare drum in the small theaters.

The automobile chase and the villain's fall over the bluff.

The idiotic usher whose one idea is to make you sit where you don't want to.

The heroine who makes up like a circus poster.

The fat lady that sits next and pushes you over so that you lean like the tower of Pisa.

The cut back, the fade in, and the back light.

The nightmares in the way of advertising posters, in front of the movie theaters that frighten people away.

The closeup showing tears making little channels through the beautiful leading lady's make up.

The "infernal" triangle.

The city villain and the innocent country maiden.

Miss Alice Brady has declined propositions from Oliver Morosco, John Cort, Cohan and Harris, the Messrs. Shubert and other producers, including her father, to appear on the speaking stage. Miss Brady professes her keen interest in the silent drama and Father Brady bows to her wishes.

Francis X. Bushman is giving Eddie Foy a close race for the honor of being the leading exponent of the Rooseveltian theory. Foy has seven children—so has Bushman now.

Our own Harold Lockwood nearly said "good-by earth" the other day when, while playing in a polo scene, his horse fell on him. Did it faze him? Dear heart, no! Says his publicity man, "He brushed the dirt from his white polo habit and calmly requested that a fresh pony be brought."

According to one of those upbubbling unofficial reports, Enrico Caruso is to finish making a picture when he returns from Italy that he started and stopped before he left these shores. Enrico is usually identified as a tenor. What's in a name?

A whole flock of movie players is going on the stage this season, but as always, the action is as great as the reaction and a whole flock of new ones, including Olin Skinner, E. H. Sothern and a number of English stage luminaries, is coming in.

NEW MYERS THEATRE.

"Pom-Pom," the new musical piece in which Henry W. Savage is offering Mitzi (formerly known as Mizzi Hajos—name simplified for the aid of sad pronouncers) is a big hit in Chicago, where it is playing to big crowds. Mitzi in the role of a pickpocket has come into her own and is described as simply irresistible. She has half a dozen songs and is assisted by Tom McNaughton—he of the three trees of "The Spring Maid." "Pom-Pom" is a comic opera of the sort made famous by "The Merry Widow." Mr. Savage has made a big production of it with scenery by Joseph Urban, music by Hugo Felix and the book and lyrics by Anna Caldwell, who did "Chorus Line" and "The Merry Widow." "Pom-Pom" will be seen in this city Monday evening, Oct. 23, with the big company and orchestra intact. Included in the company are Rita Jane, Carl Gustav, Tom Walsh and Jessie De Voie.

Cobbler's Oxen. In most countries thirteen is always spoken of as "the baker's dozen," but in Italy it is called "a cobbler's dozen." Renewing Rubber. How Toads Feed. Toads are most useful denizens of a garden. They eat all sorts of harmful insects—even wasps. They like their prey living, and the more it wriggles the more interest they take in it. The insect is conveyed to the toad's mouth with a lightning dash of a long pink tongue, which grows at the front of the mouth and curves toward the back. The tongue is covered with a sticky substance to which the food clings.—Tit-Bits.

Then it seemed to dawn upon him that there was more behind this white, sweet, noble intensity of her than just the making amends for a fancied or real wrong. Duane thought the man did not live on earth who could have resisted her then.

"I honor you for your goodness to this unfortunate woman," she said, and now her speech came swiftly. "When she was all alone and helpless you were her friend. It was the deed of a man. But Mrs. Laramie isn't the only unfortunate woman in the world. I, too, am unfortunate. Ah, how I may soon need a friend! Will you be my friend? I'm so alone. I'm terribly worried. I fear—I fear—Oh, surely I'll need a friend soon—soon. Oh, I'm afraid of what you'll find out sooner or later. I want to help you. Let us save life if not honor. Must I stand alone—all alone? Will you—will you be—?" Her voice failed.

It seemed to Duane that she must have discovered what he had begun to suspect—that her father and Lawson were not the honest ranchers they pretended to be. Perhaps she knew more! Her appeal to Duane shook him deeply. He wanted to help her more than he had ever wanted anything. And with the meaning of the tumultuous sweetness she stirred in him there came the realization of a dangerous situation.

"I must be true to my duty," he said, hoarsely. "If you knew me you'd know I could never ask you to be false to it." "Well, then—I'll do anything for you." "Oh, thank you! I'm ashamed that I believed my cousin Floyd! He lied—he lied! I'm all in the dark, strangely distressed. My father wants me to go back home. Floyd is trying to keep me here. They've quarreled. Oh, I know something dreadful will happen. I know I'll need you if—I—Will you help me?" "Yes," replied Duane, and his look brought the blood to her face.

CHAPTER XX.

After supper Duane stole out for his usual evening's spying at Longstreth's ranch-house. When he reached the edge of the shrubbery he saw Longstreth's door open. A faint light from a broad bar of light in the darkness. Lawson crossed the threshold, the door closed, and all was dark again outside. Not a ray of light escaped from the window. Duane tiptoed to the door and listened, but could hear only a murmur of voices. Besides, that position was too risky. He went round the corner of the house.

This side of the big adobe house was of much older construction than the back of the larger part. There was a narrow passage between the houses, leading from the outside through to the patio.

This passage now afforded Duane an opportunity, and he decided to avail himself of it in spite of the very great danger. Crawling on very stealthily, he got under the shrubbery to the entrance of the passage. In the blackness a faint streak of light showed the location of a crack in the wall. He had to slip in sideways. It was a tight squeeze, but he entered without the slightest noise. When he got there the crack he had marked was a foot over his head. There was nothing to do but find toe-holds in the crumbling walls, and by bracing knees on one side, back against the other, hold himself up. Once with his eye there he did not care what risk he ran. Longstreth appeared disturbed; he sat stroking his mustache; his brow was clouded. Lawson's face seemed darker, more sullen, yet lighted by some indomitable resolve.

"We'll settle both deals to-night," Lawson was saying. "That's what I came for."

"But suppose I don't choose to talk here?" protested Longstreth, impatiently.

"You've lost your nerve since that ranger hit the town. First now, will you give Ray to me?"

"Floyd, you talk like a spotted boy. I tried to persuade her. But Ray hasn't any use for you now. So what can I do?" "You can make her marry me," replied Lawson.

"Make that girl do what she doesn't want to? It couldn't be done. But if Ray loved you I would consent. We'd all go away together before this miserable business is out. Then she'd never know. And maybe you might be more like you used to be before the West ruined you."

"What'd you want to let her come out here for?" demanded Lawson, hotly. "It was a dead mistake. I've lost my head over her. I'll have her or die. No, Longstreth, we've got to settle things to-night."

"It Was a Dead Mistake."

"Well, we can settle what Ray's concerned in, right now," replied Longstreth, rising. "Come on; we'll ask her. See where you stand."

They went out leaving the door open. Duane dropped down to rest himself and to wait. The men seemed to be absent a good while, though that feeling might have been occasioned by Duane's thrilling interest and anxiety. Finally he heard heavy steps. Lawson came in alone. He was laden-faced, humiliated. Then something averted in him gave place to rage. He strode the room; he cursed. Then Longstreth returned, now appreciably calmer. Duane could not but decide that he felt relief at the evident rejection of Lawson's proposal.

"Don't fuss about it, Floyd," he said. "You see I can't help it. We're pretty well out here, but I can't rope my daughter and give her to you as I would an unruly steer."

"Longstreth, I can make her marry me," declared Lawson, thickly.

"How?"

"You know the hold I got on you—the deal that made you boss of this rustler gang?"

"It isn't likely I'd forget," replied Longstreth, grimly.

"I can go to Ray, tell her that make her believe I'd tell it broadcast—tell this ranger—unless she'd marry me."

Lawson spoke breathlessly, with haggard face and shadowed eyes. He had no shame. He was simply in the grip of passion.

Longstreth gazed with dark, controlled fury at this relative. In that look Duane saw a strong, unscrupulous man, fallen into evil ways, but still a man. It betrayed Lawson to be the wild and passionate weakling. Like the great majority of evil and unrestrained men on the border, he had reached a point where influence was futile. Reason had degenerated. He saw only himself.

"But, Floyd, Ray's the one person on earth who must never know I'm a rustler, a thief, a red-handed ruler of the worst gang of robbers," replied Longstreth, impressively.

Floyd bowed his head at that; as if the significance had just occurred to him. But he was not long at a loss. "She's going to find it out sooner or later. I tell you she knows now there's something wrong out here. She's got eyes. Mark what I say."

"Ray has changed, I know. But she hasn't any idea yet that her daddy's a boss rustler. Ray's concerned about what she calls my duty as mayor. Also I think she's not satisfied with my explanations in regard to certain property."

Lawson halted in his restless walk and leaned against the stone mantelpiece. He had his hands in his pockets. He squared himself as if this was his last stand. He looked desperate, but on the moment showed an absence of his usual nervous excitement. "Longstreth, that may well be true," he said. "No doubt all you say is true. But it doesn't help me. I want the girl. If I don't get her—I reckon we'll all go to hell!"

Longstreth gave a slight start, barely perceptible, like the switch of an awakening tiger. He sat there head down, stroking his mustache. Duane's conviction was that Longstreth right then and there decided that the thing to do was to kill Lawson.

Lawson no more caught the fateful significance of a line crossed, a limit reached, a decree decided than if he had not been present. He was obsessed with himself. How, Duane wondered, had a man of his mind ever lived so long and gone so far among the exacting conditions of the South-west? The answer was, perhaps, that Longstreth had guided him, upheld him, protected him. The coming of Ray Longstreth had been the entering wedge of dissension.

"You're too impatient," said Longstreth. "Ray might be won. She might marry you to save me, but she'd hate you. That isn't the way. Wait. Play for time. Let's plan to sell out here—stock, ranch, property—and leave the country. Then you'd have a show with her."

"I told you we've got to stick," growled Lawson. "The gang won't stand for our going. It can't be done unless you want to sacrifice everything."

"You mean double-cross the men? Go without their knowing? Leave them here to face whatever comes?"

"I mean just that."

"I'm had enough, but not that bad," returned Longstreth. "If I can't get the gang to let me off, I'll stay and face the music. All the same, Lawson, did it ever strike you that most of the deals the last few years have been yours?"

"Yes, if I hadn't rung them in there wouldn't have been any. You've had cold feet, and especially since this ranger has been here."

"Well, call it cold feet if you like. But I call it sense. We reached our limit long ago. Then we had to go on. Too late to turn back!"

"I reckon we've all said that. None of the gang wants to quit. They all think, and I think, we can't be touched. We may be blamed, but nothing can be proved. We're too strong."

"There's where you're dead wrong," rejoined Longstreth, emphatically. "I imagined that once, not long ago, I was bull-headed. Who would ever connect Granger Longstreth with a rustler gang? I've changed my mind. I've begun to think. I've reasoned out things. We're crooked, and we can't last. It's the nature of life, even here, for conditions to grow better. The wise deal for us would be to divide equally and leave the country, all of us."

"But you and I have all the stock—all the gain," protested Lawson. "I'll split mine."

"I won't—that settles that," added Lawson, instantly.

Longstreth spread wide his hands as if it was useless to try to convince this man. Talk had not increased his calmness, and he now showed more than impatience. A dull glint gleamed deep in his eyes.

"Your stock and property will last a long time—do lots of good when this ranger—"

"Bah!" hoarsely croaked Lawson. The ranger's name was a match applied to powder. "Haven't I told you he'd be dead soon—any time—same as Laramie is?"

"Yes, you mentioned the—supposition," replied Longstreth, sarcastically. "I inquired, too, just how that very desired event was to be brought about."

"The gang will lay him out."

"Bah!" retorted Longstreth, in turn. He laughed contemptuously.

"Floyd, don't be a fool. You've been on the border for ten years but you never in all that time saw a man like this ranger. The only way to get rid of him—is for the gang to draw on him, all at once. Then he's going to drop some of them. To tell you the truth, I wouldn't care much. I'm pretty sick of this mess."

Lawson cursed in amazement. His emotions were all out of proportion to his intelligence. He was not at all quick-witted. Duane had never seen a valuer or more arrogant man.

"Longstreth, I don't like your talk," he said.

"If you don't like the way I talk you know what you can do," replied Longstreth, quickly. He stood up then, cool and quiet, with flash of eyes and set of lips that told Duane he was dangerous.

"Well, after all, that's neither here nor there," went on Lawson, unconsciously cowed by the other. "The thing is, do I get the girl?"

"Yes, mother; the orphans wanted so many cores."

Admiral Lord "Charlie" Beresford is noted for his pungent and ready wit. Once in the lobby of the house of commons a certain well-known politician given to changing his views too often, said to him: "I say, Charlie, you know, you really don't look like a Statesman."

"My dear chap," retorted Beresford, "you must not go by appearances. Now you, you know, don't look a bit like a weather-cock."

Harry and James, brothers, were in their playroom for a little recreation after supper. Harry hit James with a stick. An argument followed, and in the midst of it the nurse came in with the news that it was time for them to retire. James was put to bed first. The nurse said:

"You must forgive your brother before you go to bed. He might die in the night."

After a few minutes James replied: "Well, I'll forgive him tonight, but if he don't die he'd better look out in the morning."

LIFE
ETERNAL

REV. ROBT. M. RUSSELL, D. D.,
Teacher of Bible Doctrine and Homiletics,
Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—And this is life eternal that they should know thee the only true God, and him whom thou didst send, even Jesus Christ.—1 John 17:3.

Life eternal is a condition of existence involving both quality and quantity. The quality is really the supreme feature, for endlessness to be a blessing must mean the perpetuation of that which is desirable. No one would desire an endless existence that involved either pain or discomfort. Quality, therefore, has the first emphasis in dealing with the matter of eternal life.

Life has been defined as the functioning of an organism with its environment. All life therefore is a form of knowledge, and is high or low, broad or narrow, in accordance with the environment that is apprehended. The worm has a low order of life because its environment is simply the soil. The worm knows nothing but mud, and that by the one sense of touch. Bird life is higher than worm life. The bird knows the earth and the air, the sky and the clouds, and has delight in the fellowship and song of its mates. Man's life is the highest of earthly creatures, because his range of knowledge is the widest. He knows more about the earth than the worm, and more about air and cloud and sky than can the bird. He apprehends the conditions of his own country and age, and then sweeps in thought the conditions of other lands and times. He multiplies his senses until these embrace the multiplied facts of earth and air and sky. He forms his philosophies dealing with the mystery of existence. Man's life is thus the highest of the earthly creation because the widest in knowledge.

Eternal Life.
The widest circle of human knowledge has to do with God. Science exists in the scope of her domain when she turns the pages of the rocks to read the story of earth, or sweeps the heavens with the telescope, to mark out the pathway of the stars, but there is truth deeper than that written on the foundations of the earth, and higher than that written upon the scroll of heaven with burning stars. There is a sun behind the sun. God is the widest circle of truth.

In the realm of the physical the duration of life depends upon maintaining correspondence between the organism and its environment. If either fails the issue is death. The life of the fish continues while its inner vitality has the supporting influence of the flowing stream. Let inner vitality be impaired, or let the stream run dry, death must follow. In like manner man has a political life when his soul interests are awake to political surroundings, and when these surroundings minister to a continued interest. Let there be a change toward indifference in the soul of the man, or some separation from political surroundings, and there is an end of what we term political life. Man's spiritual life has in it the element of the eternal because his fellowship is with the eternal God. Through regeneration the soul of man is made alive by the life of God. In Christian living the soul of man abides in contact with the living God. The conditions of an endless existence are therefore furnished. The redeemed soul has in it the life of God and has for its environment God himself the eternal one. The conditions for both a happy and an endless experience are therefore furnished through the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

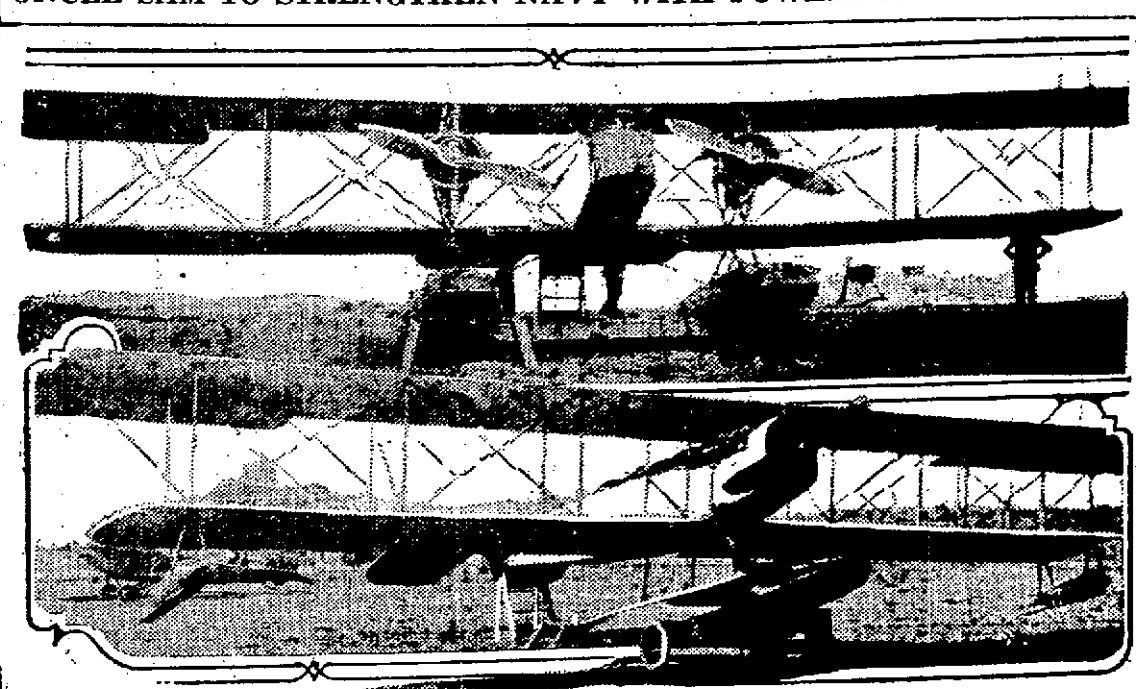

Knowledge That is Life.
The knowledge of God which constitutes eternal life is a personal knowledge. God may be known mechanically through his works just as men may be known through the buildings they have erected. Men may be known biographically in the story of their accomplishments; but this is not the same as a personal acquaintance. To know Abraham Lincoln as the author of the Emancipation Proclamation is a way of knowing him, but he was known in a better and personal way by soldiers who received his pardon when through excessive weariness they fell asleep on sentry duty. To know God is to rejoice in his fatherhood and to feel the thrill of sonship through faith in Jesus Christ. Immortality involves an endless blessedness in the knowledge of God. Human parents are powerless to prolong the lives of their children. The eternal God is Lord of life. The risen Christ will never withdraw his supporting life from the redeemed soul. "He that hath the son hath the life; he that hath not the son of God hath not the life," no matter what else he may have in world knowledge or culture.

Cannot Live for Self Alone.
So mysteriously are we linked with others in this world of mystery that we cannot fail in our duty without harming others, nor bear ourselves bravely that others are not benefited.

AFTERNOON TEA MAKES FRITZ AND TOMMY FORGET DIFFERENCES

This interesting scene was made in a British detention camp in France, after a successful attack on the Teuton lines on the Somme front had resulted in the capture of a number of the Kaiser's fighters. It shows the German prisoners enjoying afternoon tea under the eyes of only a British officer and Red Cross orderly, who are seen in the middle background.

Within French Lines Do Aviators Receive Credit.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Paris, Oct. 5.—France's eleven star aviators or "aces" as they are known in France have "officially" brought down no less than ninety-two German machines as their combined "bag."
This number would easily reach 150 if there were included the German flyers that have also been brought down by them "unofficially." The French government only credits its aviators with the machines that are brought down within the French lines and that can be "officially" established. The French aviators' "kill" list is as follows: Navarre, 14; Guynemer, 14; Nungesser, 11; Chapuis, 8; Chénat, 8; Doumle, 7; Lenoir, 7; Hubert de la Tour, 5; Heurteaux, 5; Hubert de la Tour, 5; total, 92.
In addition, several of the above aviators also have a number of German "sausage" (observation balloons) to their credit, but as these are not able to fight when attacked by the French aviators' "not count them among their 'kills'."

The eleven "aces" and their "official" records are as follows:
Navarre, 14; Guynemer, 14; Nungesser, 11; Chapuis, 8; Chénat, 8; Doumle, 7; Lenoir, 7; Hubert de la Tour, 5; Heurteaux, 5; Hubert de la Tour, 5; total, 92.

FIGHT WHITE PLAGUE

Mississippi Valley Anti-Tuberculosis Society Discusses Means of Warnings to Public.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Louisville, Ky., Oct. 5.—How best to bring to public attention the needs and importance of the fight against consumption, was debated by the Mississippi Valley conference on tuberculosis at its second day's session here today. An even half score of addresses were delivered on various phases of the topic and each was followed by a discussion from the floor.
The value of publicity through use of the "movies" was emphasized by Otto E. Bradley, of Milwaukee, assistant secretary of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association. A similar exposition on "Newspaper Publicity" was presented by A. W. Jones, Jr., secretary of the St. Louis Tuberculosis society. How schools, colleges, nurses training schools, boards of education and rural school officials might help was discussed also. Paul L. Benjamin, of the Associated Charities of Minneapolis, advocated the insertion of chapters on tuberculosis in school text books.

After the morning sessions there were luncheon meetings of sanatorium representatives and of members of state health boards attending the convention. The subject was discussed also. Paul L. Benjamin, of the Associated Charities of Minneapolis, advocated the insertion of chapters on tuberculosis in school text books.

There was also a discussion of possible legislation in aid of the conference objects, led by Dr. H. M. Bracken and Robinson Bosworth, Minnesota health officials.

ERECT PAPER MILL

Manistique, Mich., Figuring on Boom With Contemplated Transaction of Light and Power Industry.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Manistique, Mich., Oct. 5.—Negotiations will be closed within six weeks for the erection of a paper mill here which will cost in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.
The property purchased includes the plant of the Manistique Light and Power Co., with about one thousand undeveloped water power.
The matter came to a head recently when F. W. Little, Minneapolis, owner of the Sault Ste. TRIVIAL INCIDENTS

SEND MEN TO PRISON

Many Freak Causes Make Jail and Prison Birds Easy Matter to Start Trouble But Hard to Get Out of It.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Columbus, Oct. 5.—Twenty years in prison because of a five cent bet in a crap game.

Lifetime in prison because a hat didn't fit.

The above are but two of the freak causes why men are spending their days in the Ohio penitentiary, according to a report made today by Bertillon Officer Robert Miles.

The two-year man was convicted of manslaughter after killing a man who refused to "fade" five cents in a crap game. In the second, the salesman said the hat fitted, the patron said it did not. In the quarrel, the patron shot and killed the latter.

Some of the other freaks: Four robbers facing one to twenty years for loot totaling ninety-seven cents and three street car tickets.

One manslaughter convict killed a man because he refused to shut a door, thus keeping a draft off the slayer.

The creditor said the debt was $5, the debtor said $4.00. The debtor is dead, the creditor is serving a life sentence.

More than a score are in for drawing and using knives, mostly in trivial quarrels.

Several burglars are doing weary stretches for the sake of booty not in excess of the pay of a good day's shoveling.

Credit to Farmers' Wives.
The women of the farms are economically important. They feed the men who till the farms; and until men can go to work without breakfast and to bed without supper, the women who feed them must be given credit for their share in the growing crops. The food they preserve is no small item in the national wealth.—Saturday Evening Post.

Everyday Wisdom

By DON EMMOLD

LOOK UNTANGLED

It is too bad, but nobody cares anything much about your internal fret. This is sad. The people go to vaudeville, because the vaudeville actors act as if nothing were the matter with them. They sing and dance and don't look worried. If one of them looks worried it is not long until he gets canned from the vaudeville circuit. The people go to legitimate drama (with a happy ending) because things look bad for a couple of hours and then turn out fine. Tangles are unpopular; untangles are the joy of life. If you want to be a hit, look untangled; look like a conqueror, not like a victim. This does not mean for you to look like a Happy Hooligan, because it is then evident that you are a mere vegetable, not a human being; it is plain that you have been struck with happiness like some people are struck with lightning; you have not ignored anything doggedly, you are just dumb.

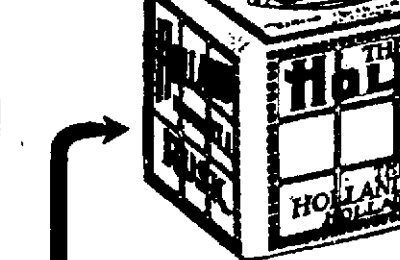

This explains why people mow their front lawns. A house with its front lawn mowed looks as if it were full of domestic felicity (and it may be). Later, people have taken also to looking at back yards and it has been necessary for some time for folks to indicate domestic order and felicity in the back yards, too.

This also explains haberdashers. The reason for wearing a gay shirt is to disguise a turbulent bosom (perhaps). People are interested in your shirt, and not much in the squirming that goes on beneath it. A fine, admirable duplicity is growing in the world, and it is encouraging to think on it. The world demands that you not overdo, and if you do, sooner or later you will see your inside courage increase. Haberdashers are all right, after all.

THINK M'GRAW WRONG IN CHARGING GIANTS THREW TUESDAY GAME

National League and Club Heads, Also Players, Disclaim Coup to Give Dodgers the Flag.

Evidently believing that his team tossed off Tuesday's games with Brooklyn, thereby clinching the National League pennant for the Dodgers, Manager John McGraw yesterday afternoon declared that he had no part in the alleged coup to give the Dodgers the flag.

McGraw previously had given out a statement in which he charged his teammates with throwing the game. He took pains to say that he did not think there was "anything wrong," but he added that his players had refused to obey orders, had put up a racial exhibition of baseball, and had placed the national game in disrepute. He departed from the diamond at the end of the fifth inning, saying he was "through for the season."

"It is a matter for the National League to settle," said Johnson, "but it is not his enough to handle it. They ought to go out of business." "He's fool!"—Herrmann.

Garry Herrmann, chairman of the national commission, had little to say about the alleged coup. He dismissed it with the remark that McGraw was making a fool of himself.

Secretary John K. Toner, president of the National League, with the announcement that the national commission would make no formal investigation of McGraw's charges.

"It is an unfortunate incident," said Toner. "After Brooklyn scored four runs off Boston the Giants played bad baseball. Unfortunately, the game was an important one. Otherwise it probably would have been a routine affair, for every team is bound to play badly at times."

It seems to me that McGraw's position is childish. The Phillies on the same day were very anxious to win, but crumbled at a critical point and lost the pennant. The Giants had been under a severe strain, having set new records for consecutive victories, and the game was a great deal more important to them than it was to the Phillies. McGraw was especially anxious to win the Brooklyn series, so that no criticism could be aimed at the Giants. The fact that at the critical moment the team cracked was too much for his composure.

Saw It Coming. Fully a week before the critical Brooklyn game, a series of stories were circulated along the White Way. Well-known gamblers professed to have inside information to the effect that the Giants would toss to Brooklyn rather than see the pennant go to the Phillies. These rumors worried McGraw, who realized that his supposed friendship for Robinson might be misconstrued in case the Dodgers won.

Anyways, as John Johnson says, it probably couldn't happen anywhere except in the National League.

BADGER BASKETBALL PLAYERS IN ACTION

Meanwell Handicapped Because of Football Activity.—Freshmen Promising.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) Madison, Wis., Oct. 5.—Preliminary varsity and freshmen basketball practice was officially started at the University of Wisconsin this week under the direction of Coach W. E. Allen, well and assistant, Albert S. Smith. About twenty men answered the call for the varsity squad and a like number also reported to the freshmen coach.

Football practice will deprive the Badger mentor of several men for early season training. As soon as the gridiron season is over the men will report for drills. The veterans who worked out this week were Lewis, Carlson and McIntosh. Olsen and Meyers, veterans of last year are playing football, as is Simpson, who suited on the squad last year. Heide, Carroll, Bond, Ballhorn, Weidenbeck, Hanson and Marling.

The freshmen team this year will be exceptionally strong and should give the varsity plenty of hard scrapping. Among the men are Mitchell and Knapp, former stars on Milwaukee normal teams, Karst and Fitzgerald of Fond du Lac, and Kremz of Evanston academy.

DUCK SHOOTING FAIR AT LAKE WINNEBAGO (SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) Fond du Lac, Wis., Oct. 5.—Badger duck hunters are enjoying an unusual good duck season.

SECRET PRACTICE FEATURES DRILLS ON BADGER FIELD

Withington, Nagged By Students, Promises One Open Day Before Saturday.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) Madison, Wis., Oct. 5.—Closed gates again faced the students who appeared at Camp Randall this afternoon to watch the Badger gridiron men go through their daily drill. Dr. Withington kept the squad within the enclosed field and would allow no one to enter with the exception of two reporters from Madison newspapers. Many of the students were disappointed at not being able to see the men in action, but Dr. Withington has assured the student body that there will be one open practice this week before the Lawrence game on Saturday. This practice, he stated, would undoubtedly be held on Thursday afternoon, as Friday will be spent in reviewing the plays in readiness for the initial game of the year.

Tuesday, contrary to all expectations, the new mentor sent the men through a long scrimmage drill behind the canvas wall, and the only news obtainable was that the coach was dissatisfied with the showing made during the scrimmage held the day before and that he was drilling the men on the weak points. The line especially was not aggressive, so that Buck and Dr. Withington are devoting all their time to the development of speed in the forward.

Vaughn, playing quarterback for the seconds, found the ends as well as the guards, and tackled easy to penetrate, and the result that squad B made plenty of gains through the "varity." The backs of the second string lineup made consistent gains at will over tackle, while Vaughn contributed four or five long runs, skirting the ends. A great improvement is hoped for by Dr. Withington in the playing of the men in the forward before the Lawrence contest.

Olsen has been continuing as full-back on the first squad and looks like a fixture there unless Kreuz pulls the unexpected and expected to his correct form. The basketball man in his first year on the gridiron is performing like a veteran. Eber Simpson and Berg at halves will start the Lawrence game with first and second in case either is taken from the game. Edler, during the last two scrimmages held, carried the ball for long gains and was given plenty of notice in the Daily Cardinal, the student paper, in which they praised his play and predicted that he would start in the first conference game.

It is very doubtful whether Captain Meyers will be able to take part in the first game of the year because of a severe cold which has kept him out of all the scrimmages thus far. He has also not fully recovered from the effects of an operation last summer. The loss of his services will seriously handicap the Badgers' forward.

SOX TAKE FIRST IN CITY SERIES

Score Is Eight to Two After Rowlands With Spurt in Seventh Amass Seven Runs.

LEE AXWORTHY IN RECORD AT LEXINGTON YESTERDAY

Record breaking continued at the Lexington trots Wednesday, the most sensational mile of the season being trotted when the Pastime stable station Lee Axworthy, driven by Ben White, set a new world's record for trotting stallions by turning the track in 1:59.4. On two previous occasions he had beaten the record of the Harvester, 2:04, the former champion, trotting in 2:00.4 at Cleveland and in 2:00 at Syracuse. The fractional time of his mile today was: quarter, 30.4; half, 1:03.4; three-quarters, 1:28.4; mile, 1:59.4.

MORRIS MILLER

Walter Johnson has had an odd year. To date he has won more games than any pitcher in the American league. Yet only two pitchers have lost more than he has. Both of these are with the Athletics. Joe Bush and Ernie Meyers of the Athletics are the two twisters who have lost more games than the Smoke King. Bush has lost more games than any pitcher in either major league. There are many who still regard Sir Walter as the greatest pitcher of the game, a bit beyond Alexander, Pfeffer, Ruth, Shawkey, Leonard and the rest. Still, having lost nearly half his games, it can hardly be said that the present season has been one of roses for him.

Little Ray Schalk is another star player who has had a peculiar year. The White Sox catcher, rated the premier backstop of the game, has fallen off in his hitting until his mark is not far above 200. Yet he has had up a remarkable base stealing record, having pilfered at last accounts more than Clyde Milan of Washington, Tris Speaker, Eddie Collins or George Sisler.

Manager Clark Griffith said he would ask an investigation of the sale of Fred Smith by St. Paul to the St. Louis Cardinals and Walter Holke by Rochester to the New York Giants. Griffith strongly suspects that the sales were made after the expiration of the time limit on August 25. Griffith says he made an offer to Rochester for Holke and that club asked him to raise it. This was on the last day sales could be made. He wired another offer and then Holke was informed that Holke had been sold to New York. What gets him is that the deal could be made so quickly.

Honus Wagner is unique in baseball in several ways besides being the only man who ever batted for 300 in seventeen successive years, and never being a holdout, he has worked for only one man in his twenty seasons in major league baseball. He went to work for Barney Dreyfuss in Louisville in 1897, and he is still drawing his pay from the same man in Pittsburgh in 1916. No other active player has worked for one man anywhere near the same number of years. Terry Turner went to Cleveland in 1904 and has been steady on that job, and Lajoie and Charley Sowers in Cleveland from 1902 to 1915.

Bud Goodwin of the New York A. C. by his triumph in the five-mile swim in the Hudson recently closed his twenty-third outdoor season of competition with an unbroken record of victories. He has never been defeated at distances greater than a mile, and he has now held the mile crown for sixteen consecutive years.

The trouble with football is that there are not enough new rules passed each year. By the final games, officials, coaches and players get to understand them all and there is nothing left for them to fight and argue over.

Joe Boehling says the reason he couldn't pitch good ball for Washington was that he got no encouragement. Manager Griffith and Catcher John Henry rode him until he was sore. He thinks that for a manager like Fohl, who goes easy, he can do much better and prove his real worth.

John McGraw is a most patient manager. He held on to Rube Marquard for three years before the Clevelanders came through for him. He also held on to Ferdie Schupp for two years, hoping to make a pitcher out of the southpaw, whose lack of control indicated he never would settle down and be a winner for the Giants. But, like Marquard, Schupp has delivered. He now leads the National league hurlers with a mark of ten victories and only two defeats.

Colby Jack Coombs, the veteran pitcher, is a great admirer of Al Nixon, his little outfielder now with the Brooklyn team. Nixon was purchased from the Dallas club in 1911, but was a little green for a fast company at that time and Robbie turned him out to the Dallas club of the Texas league for more experience. Nixon showed up so well with Dallas this season that several other big league teams offered to buy his release from President Ebbets. But Robbie refused to let him go and he is now one of the many promising rookies at Ebbets' field.

Walter Brickett, an English athlete, recently performed a remarkable and unique feat. He covered seven miles in 53 minutes 49.3 seconds, which of itself is not remarkable, but he did it by walking, running, swimming, riding a bicycle and rowing. Brickett walked a mile, ran a mile, huddled a mile, rode a bicycle a mile, sculled a mile and swam a mile in his test of versatility. There have been similar trials of endurance in the past, but rarely has the athlete attempted to cover as much ground as Brickett.

RED TAPE TIES SOLDIER TO SERVICE ALTHOUGH ILL (SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) London, Oct. 5.—The British army isn't overlooking any bets. Private Knight of Cobham was discharged from the service May 24, 1915, suffering from tuberculosis contracted in training. But his name went marching on through the branches of the war department while red tape unraveled at half a dozen points. In May 1916, as he lay on his deathbed at home, Knight received a summons to report to the colors May 18.

Another warrant came August 10 and another August 24. His mother has not yet convinced the war office that its orders will never be carried out.

New Concrete Dam Is Completed At Indian Ford

The new concrete dam of the Janesville Electric company at Indian Ford, which has been under process of construction during the summer, is completed. The structure is 250 feet wide with a spillway of thirty feet. The height is one and a half feet. The dam is the old dam, and the thick rock below water level is sixteen feet. The walls of concrete and five feet of steel rods and netting for reinforcement, were used in building the dam, which was constructed in forty-five days. The Indian Ford plant is now running full tilt and is an important factor in supplying current for the local company.

The dam was erected under the supervision of J. N. Roberts, of Madison, a hydraulic engineer, and has been inspected and approved by the state railroad commission.

The railroad for the purpose of taking launches around the dam is now in working order and allows navigation between Janesville and Lake Koshkonong and as far as Fort Atkinson.

The electric company's dam at Fulton has undergone extensive repairs this season and is now in shape for full service. At the upper dam in this city the wooden headgates have been replaced with concrete and steel, and the water wheels have been overhauled to place them in good condition for the coming fall and winter.

AMERICAN WOMAN CORRESPONDENT PICKS FLOWERS FROM FIRST-LINE TRENCHES

Mrs. Adams and a French soldier in a first-line trench.

Mrs. Harriet Chalmers Adams of Washington, D. C., well-known magazine correspondent and lecturer, is the only woman correspondent who has been permitted to visit the French first-line trenches. The accompanying photograph shows her in the firing zone wearing a bouquet which she gathered from the sides of the trench. She will return to the United States in November to lecture for the benefit of wounded French soldiers. Her experiences so far include hiding in a deep dugout for eight hours while German shells screamed overhead.

Mighty Near It.

"Do you, Mr. Snacks, think that a rich man can go through the eye of a needle?" "I don't know. I will, however, admit that my lawyers have dragged me through some very small loopholes."—Puck.

Make the Best of Time.

How mankind defers from day to day the best it can do, and the most beautiful things it can enjoy without thinking that some day must be the last one, and that lost time is lost eternally.—Max Muller.
